

To any DACBR's interested in working abroad, please review the following advertisement for a new chiropractic radiologist position at Murdoch University. Anyone interested in further details of the position or questions about working in Australia can email me at J.Cooley@murdoch.edu.au, or you can contact me in person at the Denver Workshop next week. Specifics of the job can also be obtained by visiting the University website at <http://jobs.murdoch.edu.au>

Advertisement:

Murdoch University's School of Chiropractic is seeking applicants to fill the position of Radiologist. The School was established in 2002, having developed to the point where additional radiology staff are required to meet the demands of the program. This position emphasizes teaching, but we would expect successful applicants to pursue any clinical radiology and research interests. The ideal candidate will be an individual who has recently obtained DACBR certification and is interested in gaining experience while working abroad, who will enjoy teaching and learning in a positive educational environment, is confident in exchanging ideas, and interested in working in a non-traditional and innovative radiology program. If this looks like the opportunity you've been waiting for, please contact us for more information. Applications will be accepted through 10 November, 2007. Anticipated start time is January/February 2008.