

The Musculoskeletal Diagnostic Ultrasound Certification Course at Logan University

The Musculoskeletal Diagnostic Ultrasound Certification Course will provide 120 hours of training in the application of ultrasound imaging to the musculoskeletal system. This course is targeted toward clinicians, particularly those with interest in increasing their knowledge and skill in diagnosis and management of musculoskeletal conditions of the upper and lower extremities. This course is comprehensive and will lead to a certification in the utilization of ultrasound to generate and interpret ultrasound images of the musculoskeletal system. Didactic sessions followed by hands-on training will allow the immediate application of knowledge and improve skill development. Correlation with anatomic imaging and specimens will enhance the participants knowledge-base. All imaging and clinical protocols are evidence-based. Expert faculty will provide instruction and feedback in all sessions.
